1. Do you reside in a low and moderate income (LMI) neighborhood in Hollywood per the most recent US Census data? Yes, I do live in a low to moderate income neighborhood in Hollywood. Living here gives me a real understanding of the challenges that people in these areas face every day.

2. What Community Development issues do you believe are the most important to Hollywood?

I think some of the biggest issues right now are transportation, affordable housing, and the need for cleaner, safer public spaces. A lot of people in Hollywood rely on public transit or don't have easy access to jobs or services. I've seen this firsthand while working on local transportation projects, and I believe better planning in these areas can make a huge difference in people's lives.

3. What is your definition of a healthy neighborhood?

To me, a healthy neighborhood is one where people feel safe, connected, and proud of where they live. That means having sidewalks, green spaces, reliable transit, clean streets, and community programs. It's a place where people of all ages can thrive and where opportunities are within reach—not just physically, but economically and socially.

4. What do you believe is the vision and primary work of the Community Development Advisory Board?

The board's job is to listen to what the community needs and make sure those needs are reflected in how resources are used. It's about creating long-term improvements that actually matter to residents, especially those in neighborhoods that have been overlooked.
