Required utility companies are also essential for the construction, installation, operation and maintenance of public telephone systems. In fact, they are such an integral part of the telecommunications, multimedias, and operations of cable networks that they are often considered as an extension of the services of an electric telephone company. In the event a telephone company damages the facilities of a public utility, it and the utility are jointly responsible for the damage. But mobile users not only use private communications services to a great extent, but also use public utility. Such connections are made by a particular electric, telephone, gas or other public utility. Since connections are made by a particular electric, telephone, gas or other public utility, these connections are not considered as telecommunications, and operation and control with the National Security Code are not subject to the provisions of the National Security Code.
